The Russian administration is in control, especially in the suburbs of Stettin: Silesane, Podijoch, and Klutz. The Poles must not enter the areas occupied by the Russians. There seem to be as many Russians as Poles in Stettin between 10,000 - 12,000. The Russians are much better equipped; they are almost completely motorized. The artillery, panzer troops, and infantry make a very good impression and have modern automatic weapons at their disposal. The Russians have taken control of the gas, electric, and water works, where Germans are working under their direction. They live in an enclosed area guarded by Russians to which Poles are not admitted; living conditions are satisfactory.
